It is hard to teach an old dog new tricks, and that is the principal reason why many of our veteran sportsmen who received their shooting education there will never be any wish to take up one-eye aiming. But should the sportman of the one-eye aiming habit wish to change over to two-eye aiming he will find it rather difficult at first owing to the fact that the brain has the Divorcee after Chestnut Peter, and the Divorcee after Chestnut Peter, to learn just how front and won, making all of the second day of the meeting at Columbus the judges also handed him the mount behind John Spencer after that horse had lost three heats. In the case of a new shooter, however, it would be a distinct ad-vantage for him to etart right by using both eyes, thereby training the brain to register the sight correctly from the

Charles Askins, an authority on the subject, says:
"The style of aiming with both eyes

"The focussing of the eye upon the front sight, however, will probably not be so sharp as with one eye shut, with the consequence that the vision of the game will be less dimmed. The man accustomed to aiming with one eye closed may find it best to teach himself to shoot with both eyes open while focussing upon the sight after his acquired fashion.
"However, this is not the favorite or most effective mode of two-eye aiming. Modern wing shots have pronounced in favor of the Carver method of gun pointing. While this style of shotgun aiming is of modern origin, in fact originated with Doctor Carver, yet it is the oldest of all systems of direct-ing a missle. It was used by the rockslingers, the spear throwers, the dark caster, and was brought to the greatest perfection by the long-bowmen. "Shooting in this fashion, an Indian

TRAP NOTES. Every member of the Boise (Idaho) Rifle and Gun Club has been sworn in as a deputy sheriff, Trapshooters are inclined to the opnion that in breaking 495 of the 500 registered targets at Maplewood, Frank Wright, of Buffalo, N. Y., created a world record. According to the dope we have, the best previous performances at 500 targets were by Charles H. Newcomb, of Philadelphia, and Roy Burns, of Brookville, Ind., both having broken 494. Wright was in wonderful form at Maplewood missing only 10 targets in a thousand and having four runs over 100, one of them being 250 straight. being 250 straight.

To those who have followed trap-booting for a decade, or more, shooting for a decade, or more, the result of the Heer-Troch match was no surprise, but the poor shooting of both Heer and Troeh was indeed a surprise. It was the feeling in the surprise. It was the feeling in the strapsbooting world that the targets missed by either could be counted on one hand, and then along came this total: Heer, 473: Troeh, 470.

Troeh is rated as the best squad shooter in the world and Heer is considered, by many, as the best trapshot of all time—so when one misses 27 targets and the other 30 there is cause for surprise. It was Heer's poorest shooting performance, and more than likely the poorest exhibition. Troeh has ever given. The one scintillating
